Cuban patriots organize in Belle Glade

140 men
at mill

SOUTH BAY—140 of the Cuban refugees were funneled through Key West into Miami wound up Monday night in the Gulf & Western Okelanta Sugar Mill's sugar cane cutter dormitories.

Gary Martin, a Gulf & Western spokesman in the corporation's West Palm Beach office, said Tuesday the corporation had been approached by the International Rescue Mission of Miami and Miami "tutor Maurice Ferris if Gulf & Western could house some of the refugees temporarily."

Martin said the corporation agreed to house and feed 140 young males, estimated to be between the ages of 18 and 35, in the dormitory. The 140 men were brought to the sugar mill about 11:30 p.m. Monday on a boat chartered by the corporation.

All the men were reportedly among those who took refuge in the Peruvian Embassy two weeks ago and Martin said they are expected to stay in the dormitories for one or two weeks, until other arrangements can be made.

Dr. Antonio Varona, a doctor serving local Cubans Sunday afternoon, Juntas Patriotic Cuban President Antonio Varona told the Belle Glade latines that negotiations were underway with local sugar mills to house the refugees.

BELLE GLADE — The City Commission ensured Monday that a contract will be signed today or Thursday for the construction of the Palm Beach Junior College — Glades Cultural and Educational Center when the city donated $32,000 toward the construction.

The commissioners heard a presentation by PBJC Trustee Dolly Hand and Glades Campus Provost Celia Conley about the shortage left in local matching funds after the county had donated $20,000 last week and the commission agreed to donate $32,000 toward the construction.

The commissioners heard a presentation by PBJC Trustee Dolly Hand and Glades Campus Provost Celia Conley about the shortage left in local matching funds after the county had donated $20,000 last week and the commission agreed to donate $32,000 toward the construction.

Immediately following the motion, the commission proved a resolution for PBJC President Ed Eissey to take to Tallahassee Tuesday, along with a resolution from the county commission, which was supposed to be what the state needed to approve funds for the auditorium.

Included in the appropriate motion for the resolution, Commissioner Tom Altman moved that the money be taken from the commission's construction reserve fund. The resolution stipulated the donations could be made in two increments over two fiscal years.

Mr. Hand explained that the auditorium has been in the planning stage for some time and that the college architect had estimated a total construction cost of $900,000 but the college had managed to raise some $1-million, including $300,000 local matching funds.

The auditorium was to be built under a program which would provide two-for-one matching funds from the state, with the one coming from non-educational donations.

The original $300,000 in local funds came in the form of a $20,000 from the county commission and another $100,000 that had grown by means of interest and time from a $78,000 donation made by the Sugar Cane Growers Cooperative of Florida, Inc.

George Wedgeworth first negotiated to get the land to build the Glades campus.

Dr. Eissey and several Belle Glade residents attended the county commission last week and requested another $200,000. The commission agreed when Commissioner Bill Bailey said he would agree to transfer funds from another project to expand Southwest Avenue E. The county transferred $100,000 and the commissioners agreed to another $100,000 from the commission.

Pahokee election hoopla to be missing

By AILSA DEWING

PAHOKEE—Something will be missing from the city election this year. There'll be no crowds gathered on the fire station lawn. No last-minute tub thumping and electioneering. And no campaign pamphlets being handed to voters as they enter the polling place.

The May 6 city election will be following the state election code which stipulates that soliciting votes or opinions with 100 yards of a polling place is a first degree misdemeanor.

"The law has always been in effect, we've just never enforced it," explained City Clerk Betty McCoy. "It's been traditional for people to gather on the lawn, picnic and get together. But we can't allow it this year."

The practices have been allowed as long as no candidate objected, but when candidates were polled this year, there was an objection, said Mrs. McCoy.

A total of 1,599 voters have registered for Tuesday's election which will name a new mayor from among four contenders and select one city commissioner from among three candidates.

Seeking the mayor's seat, being vacated after 20 years by Duncan Padgett, are Commissioners Robert Walty and Noma Norman; Mead Maxwell, chairman of the Pahokee Housing Authority; and Wyonia Cummings, a former council member.

Although there are three vacancies on the council, only one will be voted on. Commissioner George Rashley, seeking re-election as a Group 2 candidate, and Hugo Rainieri, the only Group 1 candidate, are both unopposed. Their names have consequently not been placed on

Junta president visits

BELLE GLADE — A "super group" of Cuban patriots, who say they represent 97 of the organizations formed by Cuban refugees around the world and make up a government in exile met with the government's president here Sunday.

The idea behind the Juntas Patriotic Cuban, according to Gilberto Alvarez, who said he has been chosen as a liaison with the Anglo community in the Glades, is to unite the Cubans, who have been splintered in the past, both by Fidel Castro and disagreements between themselves.

Dr. Antonio Varona met with the local group, referred to as the regional association, after returning from Washington D.C. where he and other exile leaders spoke with government spokesman Sunday about a boatlift bringing more Cuban refugees out of Cuba.

Although that boatlift dominated the talk during and before the meeting, Dr. Varona and others made it clear the Juntas wasn't formed to deal with that particular problem but it happened to be the first problem to crop up after the group formed.

Varona said he had told the Under Secretary of State in Washington, one of the officials he met with, that the Junta is opposed to the boatlift, that the exiles could rather see President Carter order Castro's bluff and send a couple of aircraft carriers into Havana Harbor to take out all the Cubans who want to leave.

The mistake Castro made, which triggered the current situation and the boatlift, according to Varona, was in believing that the refugees would return from the Peruvian embassy, some 200 to 300 Cubans would flood into the embassy to ask for asylum, creating chaos and trouble for the Peruvians.

"He never dreamed 10,800 Cubans would ask for asylum," Varona said, "and what the world doesn't know is that there were many more outside the embassy who would have been inside if there had been a fire."

Varona said Castro knew he couldn't handle the bad image such an exodus would create among third world nations which had been led to believe Cuba had become a "Socialist Paradise."

He noted that 85 per cent of the refugees who filled the Peruvian embassy were young people who had been born and raised under the Castro regime. He also charged that Castro's government had turned Cuba from one of the most productive farming countries in the western hemisphere into a "land of forests".

Varona, and local Cuban leaders, said the boatlift was playing into Castro's hands because it was allowing the exiles' resources too thin and was scattering the refugees.

Varona told the crowd of some 200 Cubans gathered at the St. Philip Benizi Church hall that the Junta is already receiving aid from Cuban communities throughout the country for the boatlift, including Chicago alone.

He said the cities of Miami and Hialeah over the weekend recognized the Junta as the government of Cuba and said one of the items that came up in the talks in Washington was that the exiles think the time has come for the American government to at least recognize them when decisions are made concerning Cuba.

The United States, he said, isn't giving willing cooperation to the effort to get Cubans out of Cuba but added the aim of the exiles shouldn't be to allow the freedom for Cubans to come here but for Cubans here to return home.

This, he said, is the aim of the Junta, nothing less than the liberation of Cuba from Castro's regime and he acknowledged the exiles would need the help of the U.S. government, either directly or indirectly.

He said an executive committee of the local association, and he acknowledged the general meeting started late, saying the reason was that things had been thrown into confusion because of the boatlift.

Varona said earlier he was one of about 100 Cubans from the Glades who went to Key West to help out. He said the harbor there was a scene of frantic activity even early in the pre-dawn hours.

"There was one mother and her girl who were given a package of four cookies," he said, "and the little girl said her mother to, 'Let's hurry and eat them.' She thought someone was going to come along and take them away."

"There was one woman," he said, "whose two children were taken away from her by guards before she left Cuba. A guard told her the children were the property of the state, not her. By the time she reached Key West, she was almost Key West."

Garcia and others spoke of people who had been beaten by guards on their way out of Cuba. One black Cuban had been told that if he came to the United States, he would be the object of racism and police would set their dogs on him. Before he left, a Cuban guard turned his dog on him and he was bitten severely.

"People in this country," Garcia said, "don't know how close they are to losing their own freedom. Freedom is the most important thing you have. Without it, you don't have religion. You don't have anything."

"Americans," he went on, "have gotten used to having everything and they don't want to sacrifice anything. It's time for them to realize they've had everything given to them by the government and they're going to have to stop taking from the government and giving to the people."

Demands given

When Dr. Antonio Varona and other members of the Juntas Patriotic Cuban were in Washington, D.C. Sunday, Dr. Varona said they were supposed to meet with Vice President Mondale and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, neither of whom were present.

They said they met with an Under Secretary of State and two presidential advisors, a representative of the Security Council and representatives of the Department of Justice, Immigration and the administration of Latin Affairs, a Mr. Torres.

Dr. Varona said the group of exiles presented the following to the government: 1. Regarding the current crisis and in the best interest of human rights and the international right of refugees seeking asylum from repression, the United States government should:

a. Demand from the Cuban government the freedom of all political prisoners.

b. Provide the adequate means of transportation for all Cubans wishing to leave the island. We believe a swift solution to the problem is essential. Therefore, one massive transfer rather than small weekly increments will avoid extending the issue into an indefinite period of time.

c. Afford the new Cuban refugees the same legal status as other Cuban refugees, rather than considering them as illegals.

II. The actual crisis is not an isolated incident, but a symptom of a much more serious problem which requires the re-examination of U.S. policy towards Cuba, for which we recommend:

a. Complying with the U.S. Congress Joint Resolution of October 1982 which recognizes the right of the Cuban people to struggle for the independence of their country. Help can be given in many different ways, such as allowing a Radio station to transmit into Cuba.

b. Investigating and prosecuting Castro's agents of a foreign nation.

c. Develop a plan in case of an uprising in Cuba, so that Soviet troops are not allowed to massacre the Cuban people.

Voting will determine which of the three city council candidates in Group III will be the remaining. Candidates are William Collins, Duke Jon C. Mook and Gary C. Sanders, Jr.

Both Sanders and Duke have been defeated in past elections for council seats. Mook is a first-time contender.

Because of the mayoral election, some two-thirds of the city's voters are expected to turn out, Mrs. McCoy reports. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

At 10:30 a.m. Monday a test run of the vote tabulating machine will be made using a sample deck provided by the Palm Beach County supervisor of elections office. A back-up tabulator has also been supplied in case of emergency. Mrs. McCoy said.

at mill

SOUTH BAY—140 of the Cuban refugees being funneled through Key West into Miami wound up Monday night in the Gulf & Western Okeloketa Sugar Mill, sugar cane cutter dormitories.

Gary Martin, a Gulf & Western official in the corporation's West Palm Beach office, said Tuesday the corporation had been approached by the International Rescue Mission of Miami and Miami "to find Maurice Ferre if Gulf & Western could house some of the refugees temporarily."

Martin said the corporation agreed to house and feed 140 young Cuban refugees, estimated to be between the ages of 18 and 35, in the dormitory. The 140 men were brought to the sugar mill about 11:30 p.m. Monday on buses chartered by the corporation.

All the men were reportedly from those who took refuge in the Peruvian Embassy two weeks ago and Martin said they are expected to stay in the dormitories for one or two weeks, until officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) can process them.

Martin said a rumor to the effect that 700 Cubans would eventually be housed in the dormitory was incorrect, that 140 will be the total the company will care for.

During a meeting of local Cubans Sunday afternoon, Juna Patriotic Cuban President Antonio Varona told the Belle Glade latins that negotiations were underway with local sugar mills to house the refugees.

Pahokee City Council has proposed that a leash law be drawn up to provide control of free-running dogs in the city. This week Backtalk asked Pahokee residents, "Do you favor or oppose such a law?"

Louise Angel — I'm in favor. I love animals but I don't think they should be running around.

Bertha Boyce — Yes M'am! I'm in favor of keeping dogs out of my yard. I've got no fence. I do a lot of cleaning up and I don't like it.

NO PHOTO

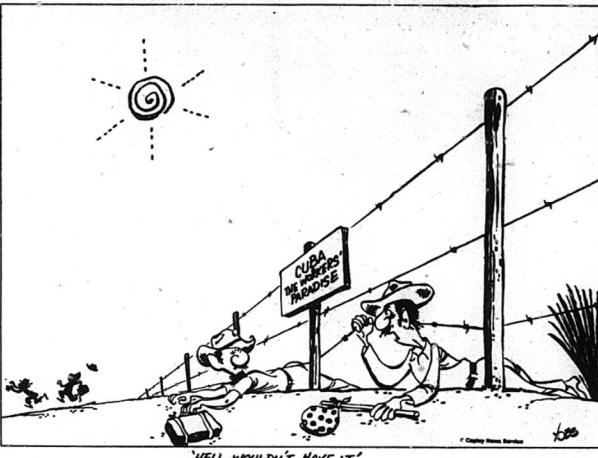

Paul Watson — I'm in favor of a leash law. Sure!

Ulysses Warren — I'm in favor of a leash law. It's better if an animal is on a leash. That way you can handle it better.

Dick Kirby — I think basically I'm not in favor. We're really a rural community and I don't think we're that plagued with domesticated animals. Dogs should be rounded up that are not properly tagged, but I think the responsibility should be placed on the owner.

Ignoring a good law

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following editorial is reprinted with the permission of the Sheriff's Star, the magazine of the Florida Sheriff Association. It was written as the president's message by Association President Frank Cline in the March-April edition.

I saw some statistics the other day that made me mad as hell. These figures revealed that only about 30 per cent of the gun-toting criminals sent to prison in Florida during the past four years have been sentenced under a law designed to crack down on crimes involving guns and other deadly weapons.

This law requires judges to give armed criminals who commit certain serious crimes at least three years in prison with no hope of parole or probation during that mandatory time.

It is a tough law and a good law. It was passed in 1975 with strong support from the Florida Sheriff Association. We called it the "Three-years-to-life" (TYTL) law, and we publicized it statewide through billboards and the media to make certain it would deter armed hoodlums.

Our efforts paid off dramatically for a little while. In 1976, the year after the TYTL law was passed, armed robberies dropped 28.2 per cent, and all violent crimes dropped 5.5 per cent; but the trend soon reversed and, since 1977, robberies and violent crimes have been increasing at an accelerating rate. In the first nine months of 1979, armed robberies increased 19.9 per cent; murder with handguns increased 20.3 per cent and shotgun murders increased 39.9 per cent.

The TYTL law worked for one year and then stopped working and I know why: because certain judges and prosecutors began ignoring it or bypassing it.

They're still doing it.

Judges don't like it because it takes away some of their discretion in serious cases. Prosecutors are prone to use it as a handy plea bargaining tool.

Sheriffs have known this was going on but they didn't know how bad it was until the Department of Corrections figures showed the TYTL law was being used only about 30 per cent of the time.

This tells me that about 70 per cent of the criminals using guns in crime are being improperly charged and sentenced. Many of them will be eligible for parole within six months to a year when they should be serving three years or more.

Some judges are apparently deciding to ignore the TYTL law and are sentencing criminals without citing that law. Prosecutors are apparently bypassing the TYTL law by reducing serious charges involving guns to lesser charges during plea bargaining sessions.

The three-year mandatory sentence applies only when guns are used in certain specific crimes such as murder of all degrees, rape, robbery, burglary, arson, aggravated assault, aggravated battery, kidnapping, escape, breaking and entering and aircraft piracy. When charges are reduced to lesser crimes, the fact that a gun was used does not automatically trigger a mandatory sentence and the gunman is likely to get off light.

If the TYTL were being properly used, I suspect more armed robbers would be going to prison. In 1978, 5,471 suspects were arrested for all categories of robbery, but only 4,000 went to prison. Thus, 1,471 went free. Some were obviously acquitted but I wonder how many benefited from plea bargaining, probation and other maneuvers.

When the TYTL law was passed, prison officials braced for a flood of prisoners but a Department of Corrections official was recently quoted as saying it actually has had no noticeable effect on the prison population and, "no significant impact on our planning for the future."

In the 1978-79 fiscal year, just under 10 percent of Florida's new prisoners were armed robbers. Two years later, immediately after the TYTL law was passed, the percentage jumped to 18, but it dropped to 10 per cent the following year and to 9.6 per cent the year after that.

Meanwhile, Florida's crime rate has increased from 680 violent crimes for every 100,000 residents in 1976, to 734

The "revolving door system" of short prison terms for armed and dangerous criminals is still operating and the law that was passed to slow it down is not being used.

The TYTL law is an excellent law but it has not been given a fair shake. Certain judges and prosecutors are not giving it a chance to do what it was intended to do. They are not carrying out the intent of the legislature; they are not living up to their oaths of office to uphold the laws of Florida and the more I think about it, the madder I get.

The patriot from Oak Creek

BY H. G. DUNCAN

The attempted rescue of our citizens held hostage in Tehran was a brave tragedy. Every armchair strategist has had his say, so I can not attempt to analyze what happened, what went wrong. I can only applaud those brave and dedicated men of Force Delta, also known as "Charlie's Angels," and mourn the eight who did not walk away.

These men, all ninety of them, are patriots. Their dedication is an inspiration.

I wish to comment, however, on another "patriot" of the Jane Fonda school.

Mrs. Barbara Timm, of Oak Creek, Wisconsin, the mother of Marine Sergeant Kevin Hermening who is being held hostage by the Iranian fanatics, expresses her patriotism and her love for this country in a rather strange way.

I think what she showed, more than character, was a bit of a warped sense of reality. She is concerned for the safety of her son. She has loved him all his twenty years. She loved him so much she even gave him two fathers. Her concern led her to defy Presidential and State Department bans on travel of private citizens to Iran. That alone places her in the criminal bracket.

We recall the television interview with the hostages (some of them) held by the "students" as a propaganda technique. Young Sergeant Hermening stated for the world to see his deplored of the American poisoning of Iranian soil so that no crops could be grown after the downfall of the Shah. His young face and eyes added depth to his statement. He truly believed the driveline he spouted.

I was angry when I watched this youngster condemn his own country. How could he? He is a Marine Sergeant given a special assignment as an Embassy guard. I think I understand, now, how he could sell his country down the drain.

He had aapt teacher.

After the rescue attempt failed, Mrs. Timm, still in Tehran, sat beside the Iranian President and apologized, on national television, for the actions of the United States.

To me, that constituted treason.

She has shamed herself, her son, and her name...names. She is safe, however, Carter will forgive her. Perhaps, if and when Kevin returns to this country, Jimmy may give him a high position in government, sitting alongside the articulate draft evader/deserter who returned from Canada to the open arms of Iran.

CRACKER

BY DEAN JONES

Tis the season of the creepy crawlers... or at least that's according to former fearless Biff Lampton.

Biff made his escape from the dread toils of journalism here at the Herald-Observer and his obvious enjoyment of his new position (it ain't no job, sports fans) as a commissioned flack for the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission can only be described as obscene.

He's earning his daily bread, if "earning" can be stretched to cover his job, by hunting, fishing (he's been competing in the Thalio Tumpa tournament this week) and whipping out the odd press release.

Na-aah, "Earning" doesn't cut it, not when he's getting paid to do what he'd rather do than anything else in the world. What he's doing is riding off the state. He should be paying the taxpayer while he's sweating out a living somewhere else.

Just to give an idea of how he puts beans on the table these days, he sent out a news release last week telling us, as if we didn't know, that this is the time of year, "South Florida residents can expect to have catfish underfoot, toads croaking and frogs creating a crescendo of sound rivaled only by a pop rock band in full electronics."

Then he goes on to explain there's not a whole lot the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission can do about it.

Now, I would think of slandering the rest of the officers serving diligently with the commission by comparing their efforts in behalf of the taxpayer with Lt. Lampton.

But on the other hand, if former fearless leaders were an indication, of course that would be the kind of action the commission could do about the creepy crawlers. How could they when they're too busy fishing and whipping out news releases about why they can't do anything?

Then, going on with Biff's release, he adds insult to injury by quoting Commission biologist Frank Morello about callers who complain about the frogs croaking all night and asking him to send someone out to round them up because they're keeping folks awake.

Come on now, Biff. Those complainers couldn't be Floridians... not even "Floridians" who moved from New Jersey a year ago. Those people gotta be Yankees because there ain't nobody with any sense who'd ask anybody to round up frogs, not with the price of frog legs running better than $4 a pound wholesale.

Besides, anybody who can't doze off to a symphony of bullfrog music shouldn't be living anywhere around where they'd get the benefit of the chorus anyway. They oughta still be living on the lower east side or in Brooklyn.

And "buy ear plugs" certainly wouldn't be the answer. A better solution would be to "buy a bitch."

You gotta have to learn, Biff. You can't be smitten with the multitudes. You gotta offer 'em serious solutions to their problems. And the only solution to something like this is, when a person's got so little class frogs and their babbler bother him, he's hopeless and oughta be in close range of Bellvue away.

By the bye, Biff, I was real glad to notice your position includes a secretary. I've got to assume you have a secretary because I know you couldn't improve your spelling that fast.

I managed to spend another evening Friday with the Glades Central track team and, I'm sure, some who's really not all that interested in track events, it was one heckuva meet.

The Raiders didn't win the boys and girls meets, or rather, they didn't just win them. They totally dominated and demoralized what could loosely be described as the competition.

Just to give an idea of the total domination was, the boys placed in all but one of the 15 events. They came in second place in the mile medley run after dropping the baton on the first 220 split... and they darned near won that.

Raider Coach Willie McDonald promised a surprise before the running events started out the mile medley wasn't it. The surprise was Jessie Hester's fast running of a 100 yard dash in competition. He won it with a time of 9.6 seconds.

Scoutarama is Saturday

BELLE GLADE—More than 250 scouts are expected to display their talents and skills Saturday at the 1980 Scout-O-Rama to be held at Palm Beach Junior College.

Glades campus from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"It's a big day for the local scouts because it gives them an opportunity to show their family, friends and community the many benefits of the scouting program," said Dr. M. J. Luce, general chairman. "They prepare all year for this event."

"This year's theme for the Scout-O-Rama," Luce said, "is 'Scouting... The American Story.' It has been added meaning for the scouts because it celebrates the 70th Anniversary of Cub Scouting."

Over the years, many well known figures in the past have been a part of Scout-O-Rama.

"Singing... The American Life," Luce said, "has been a cook at the hospital since 1970. Mrs. Shelton joined the staff in 1964 and is Records technician.

ed that most people are aware of crimes only at the time they happen and are reported in the news."

"They then make a value judgment without having the whole story," he said.

"The facts, which come up during the initial investigation and subsequent investigation are never reported," Adams explained. "Because they would make dull reading. Nobody would read them."

To illustrate, the judge read the trial which followed the sentencing investigation had brought out regarding the accident described in the newspaper account. He then asked the audience to again select a sentence.

Almost all revised their earlier selections to request a lighter sentence.

The audience had been given checklists of "sentencing alternatives" ranging from commitment in the state prison to paying only a fine. They were asked to indicate their choice of a sentence after hearing the newspaper account.

his forgiving President.

I compare the neurotic ravings of Mrs. Timm to the quiet statement of another mother of a Marine held hostage in Tehran.

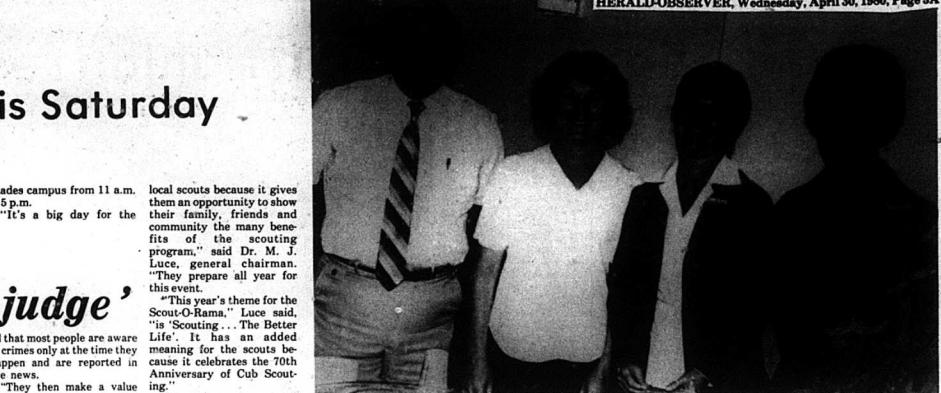

Mr. and Mrs. Gallegos' parents of their Corporal son, stated that since the attempted rescue they have felt warmth and peace in knowing that the government is at least trying to gain the freedom of all the hostages, even at the risk of the lives of the rescuers.

My hat is off to the Gallegos family.

Corporal Gallegos contrasts vividly with his superior non-commissioned officer, Sergeant Hermening. Gallegos has been seen a few times on television, and has never once said anything which would detract from his demonstrated patriotism and his love for his country.

Mrs. Timm's actions can be understood by those possessing occult abilities to predict the future. She was drawn to her actions and words out of love for her son. I don't think she, I think she was motivated to do what she did primarily out of her sense of the dramatic, her lack of patriotism (which she has so artfully instilled in her son), and by some distorted sense of feeling she and Jane Fonda have all the answers.

I salute Mr. and Mrs. Gallegos! I suggest to Mrs. Timm she take up residence in the country to which she apologized.

Rotarians 'play judge'

Post Office offers free address kits

If you're one of the estimated 36 million persons who plan to move their residences this year, you should begin notifying everyone who regularly sends you mail at least one full month before you move.

That's the advice from Belle Glade Postmaster Jim Sivens who suggested filling out address-of-address forms with you post office and send them to correspondents and publishers.

The Postal Service offers free Change-of-Address kits to help you to notify everyone, available at post offices and from letter carriers. The kits include convenient postcards to alert the postmaster and mailing to department stores, friends and relatives, utility companies, banks, credit card companies, magazine publishers and others who do business with the family planning to move.

"Too often people who are moving wait until the last minute to notify their correspondents," said Postmaster Sivens. "The result is they add up to a week's delay to their First-Class Mail delivery because it must be forwarded to the new address," he added.

Those who fail to give publishers at least a month advance notice must either pay additional postage for forwarding, if desired, or wait several weeks before the publisher changes the address.

This means customers may miss one or more issues of their favorite magazine.

Corporal Gallegos also remembers to include their account number when notifying stores and banks and to send their old address labels to publishers," Postmaster Sivens advised. "And for all correspondence, remember to include their new ZIP Code."

He first read a newspaper account of a two-auto accident in which four people in one car were killed and the driver of the other car was seriously injured with manslaughter and driving while intoxicated. Included in the story were eyewitness accounts given of the event.

The audience had been given checklists of "sentencing alternatives" ranging from commitment in the state prison to paying only a fine. They were asked to indicate their choice of a sentence after hearing the newspaper account.

The first year's Scout-O-Rama tickets are only $1 and are available from the local scouts throughout the Glades District, which stretches from Canal Point to Clewiston.

Stone briefs farmers on Iranian rescue attempt

BELLE GLADE — U.S. Senator Richard Stone made about 40 Glades area agriculturists for lunch yesterday, intending to bring them up to date on the development of gasoline and the dumping of Mexican vegetables but wound up briefing them on the attempted rescue of the American hostages in Iran.

"I support the concept of the rescue," Stone told the local farmers, "and I'd been involved before the operation. I probably would have gone along with it, but I reserve the right to judge the planning and execution."

Stone said he had been in Tallahassee Thursday night and Friday morning. He said he had learned of the attempt only shortly before White House Press Secretary Jody Powell released the news to the nation. He had been in the telephone being briefed by presidential aides.

As a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Stone said he expected a full briefing in Washington this week but there were areas he said he wasn't ready to discuss Saturday.

Of the attempt, he said the special task force of elite military personnel obviously needed more backup helicopters or some other way of delivering the helicopters into Iran to stage the strike.

"This is one of the things we'll be going into closed sessions next week," he said, adding he didn't know when the findings of those meetings would be disclosed.

Stone, said there are several options the American government can take now, including a naval blockade, mining Iranian waters and a military assault.

"As of yesterday (Friday)," he said, "they had not moved the hostages. They may move them and they may just say they've moved them. I think it will be a plus if they move the hostages into a hospital under government care."

Stone said he had been informed that President Carter had finally given the go-ahead to the rescue because of the rising turmoil in Iran, including the unrest in Iraq and the inability of the Bani Sadr regime to get the hostages transferred out under the hands of the militants.

He said the risks to the hostages had risen to the point Carter thought it worthwhile to make the attempt.

Whatever the next American move might be, Stone said, it should be done without making threats about it. "I think we should act or shut up. I would much rather have a peaceful resolution but this notice of patience isn't limitless and it's beginning to wear thin."

Concerning the sketchiness of the first stories dealing with the rescue attempt, Stone said he believed fairly complete details would be released in the near future because he had been told detailed plans of the mission had been left behind in the helicopters, which were later strafed by Iranian aircraft, killing four Iranian guards.

Asked if he would comment on the impact the failed rescue attempt would have on American politics, Stone said he wouldn't comment on that for the next few days.

"This is a time when unity is important," he said, "and if Ronald Reagan and George Bush can stand behind the President, as a Democrat, I believe I can do at least that much."

On another subject, Stone said he has a definite future in mind for the Glades area in the production of ethanol, noting there are already plans for United States Sugar Corporation to build an alcohol plant and preliminary plans are afoot to build an ethyl alcohol plant in the Belle Glade area.

"There's a good future in this area," he said, "and we can see some and sweet sorghum is an excellent market too since there is a shortage of gasoline here."

The state's junior senator also commented on the decision by the U.S. Department of Commerce that Mexico isn't dumping vegetables onto the American market, saying, "It had better not be final because it's wrong."

"I'm in hopes," he said, "that the Customs court will reverse the dumping decision."

Stone said there are two definitions which have traditionally been used to determine when goods are being dumped: the first is when they're being sold for less here than they are at home and the second when they're being sold for less than the cost of production.

He said the Mexican vegetables are being dumped under both these definitions so the Department of Commerce drew up a new definition that if the goods were being sold for the same price in Canada as in the United States, then it isn't dumping.

"They're also investigating whether the Japanese are dumping steel," he said. "That's going on

"It's like saying if you dump twice, it's not as bad as dumping once."

Stone said he and some other congressmen have so we're not dumping."

"I wonder what their reaction would be if the Japanese said, 'Hey, follows, we're selling for the same price to Canada so we're not doing anything been trying to persuade President Carter of their point of view, "but it's hard. He's listening but he's not doing anything about it."

Senator Stone is up for re-election in November and he said he hasn't declared yet, although he said his plans are coming along well and he will be declaring in the near future.

Asked where he expects to find his toughest opposition in the upcoming campaign, he answered shortly, "My wife."

would be a benefit to the entire Glades area."

Commissioner Altman asked Dr. Conley if the college intends to staff the auditorium and Dr. Conley replied he did. Mrs. Hand then said the auditorium manager may be a volunteer's job and someone had already been approached.

Commissioner Walker also wanted to know if there would be a fee for the city should the city want to use the facility. Dr. Conley said he couldn't provide a definite answer, that he would have to abide by college policy but that he hoped to form an advisory committee to deal with fees and that in no case would the college be making a profit when the auditorium was being used by a community organization or the city.

In other business, the commission:

- Approved a new four-year contract with Environmental Aviation Services, Inc. (formerly Ag-Air, Inc.) to provide aerial mosquito spraying for the city. Company owner Howard Barker said he would prefer to sign a multi-year contract but didn't want to get into a trap on escalating prices and the commission agreed to peg the second, third and fourth years of the contract to the Consumer Price Index.

The commission has offered four possible contracts: the first for one year and the other three covering two, three or four years. The cost to the city was increased by Barker from 32 cents per acre for the usual 35 applications to 40 cents per acre and the prices were consistent in all four contracts. Barker returned to the commission.

He was the only voter.

Barker and City Manager Robert Sanders noted that Barker had begun using an additive in the spray chemicals last year that saved the city a total of $17,000 in chemical costs without affecting the quality.

- Approved a summer softball league with a men's division and a women's division. The men will be playing games at the Airport and Lake Shore Parks. There will be tentatively ten men's teams and eight women's teams playing a total of 192 games between June 9 and Aug. 21.

The teams would pay fees of $250 each to pay for the expense of running the league.

"We're not trying to detract from the Jaycees league here or the Pahokee Softball League," Sanders said, "but we've been talking for years about this and it's kind of exciting that we're going to be able to hold it this summer."

- Approved a request the Glades Central High School Band Parents to use Lake Shore Park on May 17 for a school fair and the Lake Shore Civic Center that night for a dance.

The proceeds from the carnival will go toward the purchase of new band uniforms.

- Named Wednesday, May 28 as a day of alternate transportation in the city. Sanders explained that a city of similar size to Belle Glade recently did this and 2,000 people became involved. "In one day," he said, "over 10,000 driving miles were avoided."

Sanders said this could be instituted as part of the city's energy conservation program and, "On the designated day, participants would use alternate forms of transportation such as bicycles, walking, roller-skates, skateboards, horses, pogo sticks or even car pooling to commute to work, shopping and so forth."

"The various civic clubs," he said, "could be approached to assist in encouraging participation."

- Proclaimed Saturday as a "Sun Day" to promote the use of solar energy.

TREE NUMBER 1,548, the last of the 50-year-old Brazilian oaks that lined the canal side of Route 441 leading into Pahokee, fell to earth Friday, taken down by the Florida Department of Transportation and the county in the interests of safety. Resembling Australian pine trees, but at one time considered to be harder, the oaks have menaced traffic for the last several years, dropping dead limbs onto the highway, and causing at least one fatality.

NEWSPAPER READERSHIP REMAINS HIGH, BUT... A Florida Associated newspaper recently reported that 8 out of 10 Floridians regularly read a daily newspaper. And that for local news, "papers outdraw television and radio, 54% to about 40%."

READERSHIP OF FINANCIAL INFORMATION, THE SPRING WHICH KEEPS OUR ECONOMY MOVING, WAS LOW, ABOUT 21% ON A REGULAR BASIS. IT DID NOT BEAT OUT AGRICULTURE, 4% AND LEGAL NOTICES, 9%.

A WHOLE NEW BALLGAME It's interesting to note that today's environment, Washington often rewards failure (file: "Sentry") and penalizes winners. A prominent American summarized, "Success is now sufficient evidence to invite scrutiny by the government to determine how success can be achieved, as if it were a disease."

To win is to lose, and losers are not just the companies found "guilty" of success. The real losers are the consumers."

ENERGY-RICH VS ENERGY-POOR

The nation is at the crossroads in choosing a future that will be either energy-rich or energy-poor. The energy-poor path leads to more mental jobs, less buying power, lower quality of living, less upward social mobility, increased dependence on imported sources, environmental protection and national defense.

The energy-rich path offers better working environment, more opportunity, greater productivity, greater buying power, more opportunity for more people, greater national strength and unity.

It is clear that the energy-rich path is the better choice. "I firmly believe we will choose the energy-rich path. I worry that we may not make this choice in time."

Decisions relating to the nation's energy future are being made now. You can make your voice heard!

No permits, no public hearings. By contrast, some 84 different permits were required just to build and start-up Turkey Point nuclear generating plants. Just something to think about.

March of Dimes poster child due here

BELLE GLADE — Palm Beach County March of Dimes Poster Child Erin Albertson will accompany County Director Judy Walker Thursday and Friday when she visits local schools to inform them about the Eighth Annual Glades Superwalk on May 10.

Glades March of Dimes coordinator Roy Rausch said Ms. Walker and Erin will also be on hand for the Superwalk itself when Glades walkers step off on a 10.6 mile walk for charity.

The walkers will be soliciting pledges from sponsors over the next ten days. The sponsors will pledge to donate so much per mile and the walkers can get as many sponsors as possible to sign the pledge sheets.

The proceeds will go toward research and treatment of birth defects. More than $6,000 was recently donated, for instance to Glades General Hospital and Everglades Memorial Hospital. Other funds go toward the operation of the Palm Beach County clinic operated by the March of Dimes and toward national research.

The Glades Superwalk is being sponsored by the Belle Glade Lions Club this year and Rausch said he is attempting to promote teams of walkers who would be representing various city merchants.

"We even challenged Judge Don T. Adams to walk against Lion President Charles Ward when Judge Adams spoke to the Lions last week," Rausch said.

He didn't say whether Judge Adams accepted the challenge, but did comment that Ward didn't present for the meeting.

"This will be one of the smoothest Superwalks ever held out here," Rausch went on. "I'm very pleased with the way everybody's been handling their job. All the chairmen of the various committees have been doing what they're supposed to do."

He said everything is set for the walkers to begin their march.

ARC to go over the top?

BELLE GLADE — A special effort to put the Glades Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC) over the top of a $40,000 mark for the Superwalk was launched this week, with letters asking for contributions going out to many Glades residents.

ARC Director Tricia Blash said there is less than $6,000 to go before the local charity has enough to acquire the St. Paul's Lutheran Church building on west Canal Street North.

The buildings will be used as a headquarters for the ARC and will offer expanded space to serve the mentally handicapped of the community.

"Many concerned citizens and businesses have made their contributions the letter reads. "Your contribution will be appreciated."

"Provided services for people who cannot help themselves at this time in their lives."

"B. Help train and educate some people to the extent that they can eventually take a job and help themselves."

"C. Give people a sense of help and inner satisfaction that you genuinely helped others who were not as fortunate as you."

Your contribution is needed," the letter winds up. "will you, please, join in this final drive to GO OVER THE TOP?"

Raiders blow away district competition

BELLE GLADE — The Glades Central boys track team took first place in the District 14AAA track meet and the sole exception, the mile medley relay, was almost won after one of the runners dropped the baton and gave up a 75-yard lead.

The Raiders won 153 points and the District championship, leaving second place North Shore with 49 points, third place Cardinal Newman, with 43 points, and fourth place Atlantic, with 15 points, far behind.

The mile medley finish brought the sparse crowd to its feet and sent other tracksters in the infield chasing the runners on the last leg as Adam Ford gradually closed the gap and caught up with the North Shore runner, only to lose when the Mustang put forth a final sprint in the home stretch that Ford, winded by running the catch-up race, couldn't match.

That race was the only time, during the meet when Glades Central was given any real competition, coming when Monroe, on the first 220 yard leg, had the baton jostled from his grip. Monroe said later he lost heart at that time and, turning around, literally walked back to pick up the baton.

"He thought he'd been disqualified," Coach Willie McDonald said. "It is his son, Eddie Ray (McDonald's son, the next runner in the event) and several others started yelling to him to get the baton so he finally got it and started running again."

McDonald picked up some of the lost time but the final gain was made during the 400 yard dash, Jessie Hester entered the event for the first time. Hester won the sprint, with a time of 9.6 seconds.

Raymondo McDonald and Arthur Monroe tied for fourth place with a time of 10.3 seconds.

For the 120 yard high hurdles, Eddie Lusane won first place with a time of 14.6 seconds, followed by Joseph McCants in second place with 15.7 seconds and Jeff Woodson in third place with a time of 16.1 seconds.

In the 200 yard hurdles, Jeffery Womack won first place with a time of 40.6 seconds, followed by Eddie Lusane in second place at 41.8 seconds and Joseph McCants in third place at 42.1 seconds.

In the 220 yard dash, Jessie Hester won first place in a time of 22.3 seconds, followed by Elmorris Dukes in second place in 23.1 seconds and Lloyd Messan in fifth place in 24.0 seconds.

In the discus, the Raiders swept first through fourth places with Charles Lurane hurling the disc 151'7", Wilford Morgan taking second place with a distance of 141'9", Greg Bain taking third with a throw of 131'10" and Milton Swift taking fourth with a throw of 127'9".

In the shot put, Charles Miller also won first place with a heave of 53'11", followed by Wilford Morgan in second place with a 47'8" effort.

Arthur Thornton in fifth place threw a snowball of 43'9"1/2" seconds.

Morgan won the other two field events, leaping 21'3"1/2" in the long jump and 6'4" in the high jump. He was followed in the long jump by Eugene Wells in fourth place with a 5'8" effort and in the high jump by Wells in third place at 21'3"1/2" and Demetrius Singletary in fifth place with a distance of 21'2"1/2" seconds.

In the 880 yard run, Emanuel Thornton won first place with a time of 2:04, followed by Eddie Lusane in second 2:05 and Lorenzo Green with 2:08.

Levelle Moreland won both the mile and two mile runs, finishing the mile run in 4:43 and the two mile run in 10:31.

In the two mile run, Moreland appeared on the scene, finishing 100 yards ahead of the number two man. He was followed in both races by Frankie McClendon in fifth place with a time of 4:57 in the mile and 10:46 in the two mile event.

The Raiders won the 440 yard dash when Dennis Bradley came in first with a time of 50.4 seconds, followed by Theodis Morgan in second with a time of 51.3 seconds and Demetrius Singletary in fifth place with a time of 52.4 seconds.

The 440 yard relay was won by the team of Arthur Morgan, Eddie Raymondo McDonald, Elmorris Dukes and Jessie Hester in a time of 43.3 seconds.

Coach McDonald said each of the athletes scoring in first, second, third and fourth place will be eligible to compete in the regional meet, Friday at North Shore High School.

Glades Day girl netters make good season

BELLE GLADE — In a year when she lost her first two players, Rita Schoenfeld expected her Glades Day School girls tennis team to be in a building year but after dropping the first match of the season to John Carroll, they went all the way to the district playoffs before losing again.

The girls, who wound up with a 13-1 regular season wound up in fourth place at district, only three points behind the winning team. During the past two years, Miss Schoenfeld has led the girls at Glades Day to a combined record of 40 wins and two losses, including 14-1 season in 1978, a 13-0 season last year and this year's 13-1 record.

After losing their number one girl to graduation and number two girl not joining the team, "they knew they had to work hard to keep up with their winning ways. Most of the girls were willing to come over to their summer to improve their tennis ability and skills."

She said Felissa Orduna, the number five girl from last year, worked hard and became the team's number one player this year. She compiled a 12-2 record, losing twice to the number one girl from John Carroll. A sophomore, Felissa had two more years on the squad.

Monica Hooker is the only senior on the squad and she went from number three last year to number two this year, compiling an 11-3 record.

Cheryl Hooker, the number three, came from the number four last year, compiling a 13-0 record this year. "Not only was Cheryl undefeated this year," Miss Schoenfeld said. "But she was also undefeated last year. Cheryl is a sophomore."

Deirdre Orduna was the number eight player last year but this year, she played number four. She is in the eighth grade and has another four years to play. She compiled and 11-3 season this year.

Debbie Dunaway didn't try out for the team last year but this year Miss Schoenfeld said she worked hard and became the number five player. She compiled a 7-7 record, "very good for a first year player."

Clarie Pope, the number six player, this year, came over to a few matches. She was used mostly in doubles. She is a sophomore.

Felissa and Deirdre Orduna make up the number one doubles team, compiled a 4-6 record. Miss Schoenfeld said Felissa and Deirdre teamed up with Clarie to play a few matches at the number one spot and Deirdre teamed up with Debbie Dunaway to play a few matches at number two doubles.

Monica and Cheryl Hooker compiled an 11-1 record in number two doubles play. They also won at the number two doubles position at district this year.

Their only loss, to the Okeechobee doubles team, was later avenged with a 8-1 win. Their record is 21-1 in the last two seasons.

TEETH CLENCHED with the effort, Glades Central trackster Eddie Lurane was far in the lead near the end of the 120 yard high hurdles. The Raiders swept the hurdles, one, two, three, in the District 14AAA track meet Friday and took first place in 14 of the 15 events. Photo by Dean Jones

POTPOURRI will make your roses last forever

Lift the lid of an old-fashioned potpourri jar and enjoy the fragrance of roses past. The potpourri in this hand-painted jar is more than 25 years old and still going strong. Photo by Jim Jones

By AILSA DEWING

Old roses never die. They don't even fade away if they're preserved as potpourri.

Potpourri (pronounced poe-purri) is the ancient art of drying aromatic flowers combined with spices and a fixative. The practice of making potpourri is so old that the word itself comes from the Latin "rotten pot" — hardly a description to commend it!

Nevertheless, potpourri is highly commendable and it's both simple and relatively inexpensive to make. And while many flowers — such as carnations, geranium, or violets — can be used, none surpasses the rose.

With the rose now at the height of blooming here, this is surely the time to preserve a little of their fragrance. Enjoy it yourself for years to come or make a gift of it in the form of a rose jar or sachets.

Experts say that roses to be used for potpourri should be picked on a clear day in the afternoon when they are full-blown but not yet drooping. Since only the petals will be used, cut them with the shortest of stems.

Dismember the flowers and spread the petals on screening or absorbent paper to dry out in a warm place but not in direct sunlight. The drying process can take as long as a week. Just stir them daily and wait for the fragrance to set in.

Because the petals shrink in drying, you'll probably need to process several batches until you have accumulated "a quart" of petals. As each batch dries out, place it in a covered container, sprinkling each layer of petals with salt. Stir each day.

Recipes for making potpourri present an endless variety ranging from the addition of a few readily available spices to a long list of harder-to-find ingredients.

The simplest of recipes calls for Orris root (which can be purchased at most pharmacies) and any combination of spices such as cinnamon, cloves, mace, nutmeg, and allspice.

The Orris root provides the fixative and you'll need one ounce for every quart of petals. The combination and quantity of spices is a matter of individual preference but one source of mixed recipes added to a quart of petals provides a basic recipe.

The jar you use for potpourri must have a cover, of course. If you're among the fortunate ones you will have inherited an old-fashioned rose jar from your grandmother — a china jar with hand-painted decoration perhaps. Or use an oldtime candy dish on a stem. And the apothecary jar in either its antique or modern version makes a fine potpourri container.

Add the dried petals layer at a time, sprinkling each layer with Orris root and spices. Then stir the mixture and leave it to "age" for three weeks, stirring twice a week to blend it.

After that it's yours to enjoy for years to come.

Or you can create little sachet bags from muslin or nylon (two layers), fill with potpourri and scatter the rose petals where you may — among your linens, for instance.

The potpourri process we've described is known as the dry method. There is also a moist method which follows the same basic procedure but includes adding a few drops of oil of rose. With the moist method, the rose leaves ferment. When the fermentation begins, you stop stirring the mix and let it form a "cake," which is probably what led to the term "rotten pot" in the first place.

As we said before, the choice of spices is unlimited. Dried orange or lemon peel can be added, using a heaping teaspoon to a quart of petals. Vanilla pods, sandalwood, and even brown sugar are called for in some recipes. And there's no fixed rule about quantity either. Suit yourself.

Even the choice of roses is individual, some experts preferring one variety over another for their "lasting" quality.

Sourcebooks are readily available at the library including "The Art of Drying Plants and Flowers," by Mabel Squires.

Nancy Creech, incoming president of the Belle Glade Garden Study Club, displays potpourri made in an apothecary jar.

FROM THE GRAPEVINE

By BRENDA BUNTING

Super Walk 80 will be kicking off soon in the Glades Area with children as well as many adults participating.

It is going to be held a few weeks later than usual, but for many, this means a few extra weeks to round up pledges for the walk.

Last year's walk-a-thon for the March of Dimes was an enjoyable event for everyone including myself. The weather turned out to be perfect and the route was easy to follow and away from the flow of traffic.

My sons decided they wanted to try to walk last year so I helped to round up the pledges for the walk, as well as promising to walk the route with them.

The Kiwanis Club of the Glades pledged Bobby a dollar a kilometer for the walk but added the kicker that if I walked the whole 20 kilometers they would donate another dollar per kilometer.

I was committed. Alma Henry had agreed to walk with me and at the last minute rounded up enough pledges to make the trip worthwhile.

I was very worried that my son Chris, then six, would be unable to finish the walk, so I admonished him to not overtax himself and to climb on the poop wagon if he became too tired.

The warning wasn't necessary I found out later. Alma and I had only gone a few miles when Bobby, Chris and a few of their friends passed us coming back. Seems they had run, hopped and jogged the entire distance!

Alma and I found the going a little rougher. On the way back, I seemed to be developing a blister on my foot. I mentioned the fact to Alma who didn't give me much sympathy. She had blisters on her blisters at that point.

Pit stops became very frequent during the few remaining miles back and I had my doubts that Alma was going to be able to finish, but she was determined to make a go of it.

We laughed and hobbled the last few blocks to the finish line and swore we weren't going to do this again next year.

The following Monday morning when I got to work I just had to tease Alma by saying you can sure tell the country girls from the city girls. I immediately regretted having said anything when I found out she had spent the entire weekend in bed, only getting up for necessities.

Never-the-less, I plan to talk her into walking with me again this year to help a good cause and just for the fun of it.

According to Roy Rausch, the coordinator for the walk-a-thon, Ms. Judy Walker will be distributing pledge cards to the schools on Thursday and Friday of this week and cards can also be picked up at the Labor Force office in Belle Glade.

Hope to see you there, May 10 at 8 p.m. behind the Glades Central Annex. Registration starts at 7 a.m.

Flowers are blooming for the Red Cross Ball as committee members Ann McMillan, Norma Mills and Mercy Landry create paper blossoms to decorate the Elks Club for the May 3 dance. Calhoun and His Band will provide music from 9-1. Tickets are $10 each and may be purchased from Sandy Maynor, Angela Puig, and Linda Moss. Proceeds will go toward purchasing equipment used in Red Cross cardiovascular training programs in the Glades area.

Lately a lot of people have been noticing that some of their house plants or outdoor plants are showing increasing signs of the foliage getting a stippled or bleached-out appearance. In some cases the effected foliage may abort and drop to the ground very sparsely foliated and leggy.

If you check these leaves carefully and if your eyes are good enough you will be able to find the cause of the problem — spider mites. These tiny pests are related to ticks and ticks and have eight legs instead of six like true insects.

These minute pests can be found throughout the year but are most noticeable during the late winter and spring when we have our dry weather.

Mites are tiny and many people cannot distinguish them without the aid of some type of magnification and since they are so small and light wind currents easily carry them from an infested area to a new area. Control of mites is also somewhat difficult because of their rapid reproduction. Under favorable conditions mites can go from egg to mature adult in seven to eight days.

There are many methods of controlling mites but the most important thing is that more than one application of the miticide be applied in order to make sure the mites have been controlled. Most miticides do not kill eggs and this means a follow-up spray within seven days is necessary to kill the newly hatched young before they grow up and reproduce.

Some of the more popular miticides that are readily available include Kelthane, Ixotrol, Cygon, Orthene, oil sprays, and various other products. Make sure when using these products that they are not injurious to the type of plant you are using them on. Check label directions carefully before using the product and then use it strictly according to label directions; otherwise, you may not achieve complete control.

Make sure if mites are located on house plants that these are isolated from others in the room since they may be spreading to other plants and the others. Also, if you are purchasing new plants inspect them before bringing them into the house so that you do not bring problems indoors and spread them to your other plants.

Cystic Fibrosis Bike-a-thon May 10

BELLE GLADE—Our goals are simple: To find a cure or control for the inherited disease cystic fibrosis while improving diagnosis and treatment for persons suffering from the serious lung damaging disease," said Mrs. W.M. Adams, chairman of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation's Bike-a-thon in the Glades.

"In Florida we have dedicated volunteers, local organizations, participants, researches and researchers, and major treatment centers from the panhandle to the keys," Mrs. Adams added.

HOLOCAUST DISPLAY at the Glades Central High School in observance of Holocaust Remembrance Week drew the attention of Pedro Ruiz and Stephanie Collier. Poster size photos of Nazi Germany portrayed the horrifying scenes that took place in "the final solution."

Next year

Immunization for HS students

TALLAHASSEE—Faced with continuing disease outbreaks among high school and college age youths throughout the state, Florida health officials have said that students entering high school next year will be required to furnish proof of immunization against six diseases.

Currently only kindergarten first graders, and other first time Florida students are required to certify immunity to measles, mumps, rubella, tetanus, diphtheria and polio. Starting next fall, all students entering high school will be required to furnish proof of immunization.

Officials said copies of the new guidelines are being sent to schools, county health departments, and private physicians.

The change was made because of continuing disease outbreaks among high school students, especially among youths throughout the state, according to Dr. James Howell, State Health Officer and Health Program Office Director for the Department of Health and Rehabilitation Services (HRS).

He said measles (rubella), a highly contagious rash disease, is the most worrisome because a large percentage of high school students are still susceptible to it.

Rubella, also known as German measles or three-day measles, may also be a threat to female students of child bearing age and others such as susceptible female teachers should they be exposed to the disease during pregnancy.

Rubella virus attacks the unborn fetus and often causes miscarriages and birth defects, Howell explained.

Mumps, can have devastating complications for teenagers and young adults sometimes causing deafness, encephalitis, or sterility, Howell stated.

Last year Florida counties reported over 900 cases of measles, 310 cases of rubella and 195 cases of mumps. Three other vaccine preventable diseases—tetanus and diphtheria are rare but still pose a threat to susceptible persons, Howell said.

In 1971 when the compulsory school immunization law was first implemented the immunization rate for first time enterers in grades K-1 has risen from about 50% to 93.7% this school year.

"Education and health officials have done a good job of enforcement and we now have a well immunized school population in kindergarten through eighth grade," Howell said. "We plan to do the same job for our upper grades."

Also registrations will be held the day of the bike-a-thon.

East Lake Middle School honor roll

PAHOKEE—A seventh grader and three fifth graders earned all A's and were named to the Principals List for the third nine weeks' grading period, at East Lake Middle School.

East Lake's principal, Lillie Meadows, identified the seventh grader as Angela Williams. This is Angela's second Principals List recognition.

Also in the Glades can start a shelter, and whenever space is available, the Crisis Stabilization Unit has consented shelter.

Battered women in need or service may call 996-8077 for assistance.

Troy said the next public meeting is scheduled at 12 noon at Bryant Auditorium at Glades Office Building on Wednesday, May 21, in West Palm Beach told the group how a group of volunteers worked for approximately a year before the first one bedroom apartment for battered women opened in WPB.

Ms. Murray said the shelter now consists of four apartments.

Ms. Troy said interested persons, and law enforcement agencies are welcomed to attend.

"We would like to see a local group organized with a chairman named at the next meeting," Troy said.

"We were accepted by YMCA immediately, and because of the community reputation in the community, the community accepted the community's ideas with limited reservations," Murray said.

What we don't have is enough money, that is why the Florida Chapter of Cystic Fibrosis Foundation is appealing for support to expand research and care programs through the Breath of Life Bike-a-thon," said Adams.

On May 10, local volunteers in the Belle Glade, Pahokee and South Bay communities will participate in the local bike-a-thon.

The bikers from Belle Glade will leave Chosen and make a trip to Pahokee and back.

The Pahokee bikers will begin their journey at the Lous V. Public Library.

Mrs. Adams said Mrs. Margaret S. Edwards is serving as co-chairman of the bike-a-thon.

Persons wishing to participate in the bike-a-thon may contact Mrs. Edwards, at 924-8701.

Persons living in Belle Glade wishing to participate in the bike-a-thon are encouraged to contact Mrs. Adams for additional information.

Also registrations will be held the day of the bike-a-thon.
